The racing has finished and results can be found here. The Finish Lynx system being used for results is a camera/computer system for race timing. They worked with USRowing in June at the olympic trials in Camden and did USRowing Club Nationals last year. It is very cool and right out there as far as bringing high tech to the rowing community. A lot more sophisticated than binoculars and stop watches at the finish line. Of course this system only makes sense for summer races as the fall head races generally do not require the quick and precise finish line action.

The company, Lynx System Developers, Inc is based in Woburn Mass and has developed systems used by a multitude of events from soap box derbies to the olympic track and field trials recently completed in Calif. Their web site is www.finishlynx.com
